BP Oddo recently reached an impressive milestone with regard to New York City public schools. With 2017's budget allocations, he exceeded the $100 million mark of funding allocations since he first became an elected official. Throughout his tenure in the City Council, he allocated $62,589,927, and during his first term as Borough President, he provided another $51,928,000 in funding.

The Borough President is well aware of the fact that these are hard-earned taxpayer dollars, and that's why he has always tried to ensure your money was used in the best possible way, by helping as many Staten Islanders as he could while achieving the biggest possible impact.

He has chosen to address the needs that were critical to empowering educators, in an effort to teach their students as effectively as possible. Over the years, he has funded amenities such as additions to overcrowded schools, new auditoriums, gymnasiums, libraries, media centers, athletic fields, computers, smartboards, and wiring upgrades. He always believed that money for technology and libraries was money well spent and realized that every dollar allocated to our schools was a dollar invested in the critical effort to mold a classroom full of students who were ready to excel on the next level. We are proud to do what we could to move them along the path to becoming responsible, accountable, and productive Staten Islanders.

We truly believe that if you look at the challenges we have as a community in Staten Island, the solution is investing in our young people and making them the best that they can be. We understand the value and importance of having updated technology and facilities for the children of Staten Island.

So a big “thank you” to Staten Island taxpayers. The money we get to allocate is your money—the BP just tries to ensure it goes where it will have the biggest impact. At Borough Hall, schools and education will always get the highest priority.
